Local landcare activities

Landcare are volunteer organisations doing local bush regeneration. Often they hold working sessions doing plantings of native vegetation, weeding, and reclaiming disused or neglect local land. There are a number of active Landcare groups in the Sydney Metropolitan area. For a complete list, visit www.landcarens.org.au

(Updated October 2010)

Cooks River Valley Association	The CRVA is an incorporated association made up of caring local residents who are committed to rehabilitating the Cooks River and fostering community spirit within the Cooks River Valley. We work independently and with like-minded groups to improve the quality of life and facilities in the local environment.	www.crva.org.au/
Inner West Environment Group	The Inner West Environment Group (IWEG) is not-for-profit incorporated community bush care group. It was founded in 2000 by residents in the suburbs of Summer Hill, Dulwich Hill, Leichardt and Haverfield in the Inner West of Sydney, Australia, to undertake bush re-establishment in the Hawthorne Canal catchment.  IWEG Working Bees are between 10am and 1pm on the 3rd Sunday of	www.iweg.org.au/
